NEWS FROM OUR CHURCHES:

Country & Town Baptist Church, Mason Dixon Baptist Church and Stewartstown Baptist Church:

Students from Country & Town Baptist Church, Mason Dixon Baptist Church, and Stewartstown Baptist Church gathered together on October 16th and 17th for a joint youth group service weekend. The three churches brought together over 30 students who spent the weekend connecting with each other, studying God's word, and serving others at Grace House Ministries in Harrisburg, PA. Pastor Jacob Shetron from Country & Town, Pastor Tyler Hogg from Mason Dixon, and Pastor Chandler Robinson from Stewartstown share that the weekend was a great success. It was fantastic to see students from different churches working together, being the hands and feet of Christ. They hope to hold future events such as this one to continue teaching students what it means to be on mission for Christ and work together with other believers.

A WORD FROM BRAD ~

Teaching or Training? Which is it?

The terms “teaching” and “training” are often used interchangeably, but there are important differences. What is the role of the pastor; to teach or to train?

So, what is the difference between teaching and training? Teaching is more theoretical and abstract, while training is more hands-on and practical. Teaching seeks to impart knowledge and provide information, while training is intended to develop abilities. Teaching is for understanding; training is for doing. Teaching is verbal; training is hands-on. So that’s the difference.

It is possible to teach someone about buoyancy, fluid dynamics, and water displacement, but that knowledge doesn’t replace the hands-on training of baptizing a new believer. Practical training is necessary to use the abstract teaching.

Thanksgiving is around the corner and many of you will be cooking and serving a Thanksgiving meal. Theoretically, it’s possible to just read a recipe and make a dish, but the hands-on experience is so vital.

Teaching provides knowledge, instruction, or information, while training develops abilities through hands on practice with supervision.

When I graduated from college, I heard that I lacked the practical skills (experience) that were necessary for a job. I’ve found that colleges and universities are great at teaching but are weak with the hands-on, practical training.

So, what is the role of the pastor or teacher? To teach or to train? Ephesians 4:11-12 in the ESV says, “And he gave the apostles, the prophets, the evangelists, the shepherds and teachers, to equip the saints for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ,”. Paul is saying that the role of the pastor or teacher is to equip or train other believers for ministry. Both teaching and training are vital and must be combined to fully equip the follower of Christ.

When most of us were about 16 years old, we started taking the written course or theoretical part of Driver’s Education, but then came the practical part, driving behind the wheel. To obtain a driver’s license and drive a car, it took both teaching and training.

We are all called to make disciples, but does that happen by teaching or training? I believe that it’s both. As the great commission states, “Go and make disciples”, and “teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you.” How did I learn to make disciples?

I watched another man make disciples and then he watched me and helped me to continually improve in making disciples. I would say my personal experience was 30% teaching and 70% hands-on experience.

In conclusion, it's the role of the pastor and teacher to both teach and train believers for ministry. Teaching and training go hand in hand "for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ."

NEW LIFE AT PENN STATE: AUTUMN MILLER

PUMPKIN PATCH FUN: This has now been a four-year tradition with our international student friends who love to experience these fall “funtivities.” Many of them have watched the “Gilmore Girls” television show and say that it reminds them of being in Stars Hollow. The farmers told us that since it had been so warm with not overnight frosts, the weeds were out of control in the fields (as you can see in the picture.) We really had to dig for our pumpkins this year, which made it even more rewarding when we finally found a prized pumpkin.

We had our yearly Fall Retreat at Krislund Camp! Although there was a smaller turnout this year, it did not stop us from spending some sweet time with God, bonding with each other, and getting some much-needed rest away from busy campus life. There is little to no phone service at this camp, and each year every student expresses how much they appreciate this. It feels good to disconnect and just be present in the moment with friends:)
